

Nominate Today 2019 Dissertation Award

November 22, 2019

2019 Dissertation Award | Nominations Now Open!!

The Industry Studies Association (ISA) is pleased to invite nominations for its 2019 Annual Dissertation Award competition. The goal of the award is to recognize and reward outstanding doctoral research in the area of industry studies. The award is accompanied by a $500 honorarium for first prize and a $250 honorarium for second prize. The award winner will be invited to attend the 2020 Industry Studies Association conference held in Boston, MA. For more information about the award, please visit: <https://www.industrystudies.org/dissertation-award>.

Nominations are due by December 15, 2019, but can be submitted at any time. At the time of the nomination, a nomination letter, an extended abstract, and a CV will be required. Nominations can be submitted here: Dissertation Award Nomination Form

To be eligible for the competition, candidates must have completed a doctoral dissertation in economics, management, engineering, political science, sociology, or in a related or interdisciplinary field between September 1, 2018, and August 31, 2019. Candidates must have successfully defended their dissertations and received the final approval and all required sign-offs on their dissertation document by the August 31, 2019 date.

We hope you consider nominating a promising recent graduate for this award!

John Helveston, The George Washington University
ECDC Dissertation Award Chair

Learn More About the Dissertation Award

Dissertation Award Nomination Form

2020 Industry Studies Association Annual Conference

Come to MIT Sloan School's Samberg Center for the 2020 ISA Annual Conference, which will include two days of paper sessions, two plenaries, and a pre-conference Professional Development Workshop for early career scholars.

Read more about the 2020 ISA Annual Conference here